HEAVY HAND ON HAITI.

While the Administration has been supine almost beyond belief in the case of Mexico, while both Americans and foreigners have been killed and outraged without limit in that unfortunate republic, and President Wilson has merely "watchfully waited," Haiti has felt the heavy hand of the Administration and is now confronted with an inexorable demand from the United States that she turn over to this country the entire administration of her financial affairs. This is to be affected by treaty, but a treaty made under the rifles of hundreds of American marines and within range of great guns of American battleships. It is contended that the course of the Administration is based on the Santo Domingo precedent of the Roosevelt Administration. But there are two essential differences. First, Santo Domingo appealed to the United States to step in and protect her from her foreign creditors, and secondly, Santo Domingo could and had granted numerous foreign concessions, whereas, in the case of Haiti, her constitution specifically forbids the granting of concessions to foreigners or the incurring of foreign indebtedness. Concessions are, in effect, granted to foreigners, but it is always by means of a subterfuge, such concessions being given to a native Haitian who is taken into partnership by the foreigners. Of course, the reason for this Administration's drastic action in Haiti is not difficult to discover. Haiti is a negro republic and, in eyes of a Democratic Administration, negroes have no rights which a white man is bound to respect.

THE Y. W. C. A.

The winter season approaches and it is time to think of the plan for the establishment of a Y. W. C. A. in Janesville. The re-organization of the Young Men's Christian Association has filled the void so long felt in the handling of the problem in that quarter and it is now up to the citizens to aid the good ladies who are interested in the betterment of the conditions that surround the young women of the city. It is not a question of social betterment, it is a problem of giving the girls a chance, equal to their boy friends. While the argument has always been raised that the majority of our young girls live at home and consequently do not need such a recreation place provided for them, the fact remains that the majority of the young men live at home too, and yet have such a recreation privilege. It has been suggested that the women's clubs of the city might unite and rent a building suitable for purposes designed for recreation and social purposes and meet the demands made. Madison has such a union of the various club interests, and at the same time has a Y. W. C. A. for the city girls as well as a similar organization for the university students. We pride ourselves on civic matters. We point with pride to the achievements of the past and yet not a step further and make in fact a club for the young girls of the city in connection with the other achievements accomplished by the women of the city. We have our rest societies, the result of the untiring labors of the various clubs and many other civic improvements can be pointed to as directly influenced by the women of the city, why not this girls club plan?

GERMANY'S ATTITUDE.

Only the biased mind can fail to appreciate the attitude that Germany has taken as regards to the oceanic travel of American citizens and the pledge given by their representative in the United States, relative to their safety. This subject warlike Germany has been waging against the commerce of the world bound for English or French ports, has been the only method they could use to register a vigorous protest against the importation of munitions of war or foodstuffs to their enemies. Their fleet bottled up in the same harbor it was when the struggle began a year ago, except for a few occasional raids, they have had to resort to this latest method of warfare to have an equal chance with their English opponents. That they have been moderately successful must be admitted. Given Lloyd's great shipping insurance organization has not reported half the losses sustained by the Allies through this method of fighting. However, the Lusitania sank, the Gulllight was attacked, the Nebraska was also a victim of the submarine and then came the Arabic. This latter came ashore at home owing to the loss of a citizen of Rock county and it was feared that it would be the last straw that broke the camels back and the skillful diplomatic exchange of notes between our Washington government and the German representative has averted any possibility of avert action. The United States does not want war with Germany or any nation. It is not prepared for war. Its people, made up of various European nations, of the first, second and even the third and fourth generations, do not desire an armed interference in the broils of the continent. Of course as in every community there are many who uphold the Fatherland in violent talk and they find ready adversaries who extol the virtue of the Allies but this has not sectional and as a whole the American people realize the gravity of the situation, bemoan the cause and effect of the struggle and thank the great living God that the United States is not a party to this slaughter. The promises of Germany are efficient. The honor of the United States is satisfied and the question should be dropped.

Laurence C. Whitely will be found watching after the finances of the state, despite the fact that some of the "Tax Eaters" managed to slip an amendment to a later law through that cut off the appropriation for the office he now holds. It will come out of the funds set aside for the running of the Governor's office and if you please, if these funds are not sufficient out of the Governor's pocket. That is the way our Governor does business.

Governor Phillips is not a bit afraid of the attack that La Follette may make upon his attempt to lower taxes. It will be a peculiar situation when the Junior Senator takes the stump to attack a Republican Governor who seeks to benefit the voters of the state.

The next big fair is the Wisconsin State Fair at Milwaukee. Of course the state has come to consider this exhibit a particular Milwaukee attraction but it is not. Under the reorganization politics are to be eliminated and it is to be a peoples fair at last.

He had really almost made a hit with her, for she had not yet found out that he was a smart aleck.

It was the second evening she had allowed him to call that week. "Oh, Miss Weedies," he said suddenly, "which would you rather choose, to be more foolish than you look, or to look more foolish than you are?"

"Well, let's see," she replied thoughtfully, "why, I think I'd rather look more foolish than I am."

"Impossible!" said he. "I was caught that time, wasn't I?" she smiled, though not very pleasantly. "Well, I'll take the other one, I'd rather be more foolish than I look."

"Impossible!" said he. "Excuse me a moment," she apologized, and left the room.

Liability of Owner of Dog. The owner or keeper of a dog is held to a strict accountability under the Wisconsin law for the damage or injury caused by his animal. He is liable to any person injured or to the owner of any property damaged by the full extent of the damages. It is further provided by statute that the owner or keeper of any dog which shall have killed, wounded, or worried any horses, cattle, sheep, or swine, shall be liable to the owner of such animals for all damage done without proving notice to the owner or keeper of the dog, or knowledge by him that his dog was mischievous or disposed to kill, wound, or worry horses, cattle, sheep, or swine.

Mr. John C. Schlueter, of Janesville, is the fortunate possessor of an International Harvester 8-16 Mogul tractor recently purchased from the Bower City Implement Company.

This useful little machine has become widely known as the "small farm tractor for all farm work." It is a tractor of the 4-wheel, general purpose type, which can be used for all plowing, seeding, harvesting, hauling, and for the running of all such machines as ensilage cutters, huskers and shredders, feed grinders, and other power machines in general use on Wisconsin farms.

Mr. Schlueter expects to use it for all these purposes and to do with it, in the course of a year, a great deal of the work for which at present he is using horses. Advertisement.

DECISION IN DUDLEY CASE ON SEPT. 16TH

JUDGE MAXFIELD RESERVES FINDINGS TO CONSIDER EVIDENCE AND ARGUMENTS.

MOST ABLE ARGUMENTS

Attorneys Make Fluent and Able Arguments in Morning and Afternoon—Jeffris Strong on Defensive Side.

When Attorney M. G. Jeffris completed his arguments in the municipal court this morning an entirely different light on the Dudley arson case had been effected, and more than one expressed a doubt if there could ever be a conviction on the testimony and evidence in the case. The address by Mr. Jeffris was a masterpiece in defensive arguments, and in the hour that he spoke close attention followed each statement of facts presented with skill and force, and many of the state's strongest points were belittled and ridiculed by the defendant's counsel. Attorney G. D. Baker and district Attorney S. G. Dukes of Booneville for the state and presented their cases in an able manner this afternoon. Attorney Charles B. Pierce will make the final plea for his client, Dudley, before a jury trial on the complaint of day-time arson.

In the afternoon Attorney Charles B. Pierce "came back" with strength and force. He made a strong plea for two hours, pleading for the court to bind Dr. Dudley over for trial. Mixing his arguments with blinding remarks about the defense's case, and the cases on the value of circumstantial evidence, Attorney Pierce's address must have impressed the court. At the conclusion Judge H. L. Maxfield pronounced the case closed and the court holding Dr. Dudley for trial by discharging him from custody, until September 16th at ten o'clock. The bail for the defendant remained at one thousand dollars.

State Evidence Ridiculed. The feature of the morning's session, without a doubt, was the address by Mr. Jeffris. The two state attorneys, who presented their arguments and presented the legal and the evidence side of the pending case. Jeffris appealed to the court that the state was "bearing" the burden of proof, and that no testimony or evidence had been introduced that supported any allegations that Dr. Dudley had set fire to his house for the purpose of obtaining the $11,000 insurance carried on the house and contents.

The attorney belittled the testimony of Deputy Sheriff Marshall and his sarcastic tones "showed up" arguments of the legal nature made by the state. Attorney Jeffris stated at the outset it would be conceded that the fire at the Dudley residence was incendiary—some one had set it. It was claimed that had Dr. Dudley been guilty of firing the place, as alleged, he could have at least attempted to destroy the evidence left in the house on his return.

The main argument made by the defense was that Dr. Dudley was physically unable to perform such a feat as setting the house afire under the conditions as brought out by the state, including ripping out parts of the stairway and placing jars filled with kerosene in the chimney.

The time element and the alibi established were brought out in a clear manner to show that no candle, as brought out in the testimony, had been found in the Dudley home, which had been burned as long as it was proven Dr. Dudley was away from the city. The testimony of Mrs. Richard Lee, who heard the fire, was given before three o'clock in the morning, the day of the fire, and the finding of the broken glass jar in the rear of the Dudley house, were connected by the attorney to mean that some person had fired the house at that time and Dr. Dudley was in Kenosha in a hotel at that exact time. It was related that the testimony that no one had seen fire burning from any candle set on a barrel of hay as claimed by the state, and one witness testified that he would look into the window the day after the fire.

"That job was done by an insane person, an idiot, or a fool," claimed Attorney Jeffris.

P. E. Huber presented his facts with force and it was easy to see that his experiences in arson cases were not limited but was from extensive prosecution of such cases. The crime was a question of different from any other felony. It is a calm, deliberate offense, carefully planned, and the guilty person lends much of his time to the proving of a defense and in the case of serious cases, the defense is an alibi—as in this case.

A Time Fire. It was claimed that the facts of this case clearly indicated that the jury should pass on the guilt of Dr. Dudley and for them to decide if the defense as brought out by the defense was more than the circumstantial evidence of the state. The Dudley defense was claimed to be a "time-fire." That is, one in which the person guilty made preparation for the fire with lighted candles, left the house, and the candles were extinguished. It was shown that marked candles had been found in the Dudley home and that all implements used in preparing the house for a fire, including the candles, belonged within the house and were pieces of property owned by Dr. Dudley or a member of the household.

Used a Candle. The candles used to be positive evidence of the time fire and that the trial to Kenosha made by Dr. Dudley with his repeated alibis was alone for the purpose of establishing an alibi. It was shown that the candles were more than a week to prepare the Dudley house for that fire, and Dr. Dudley, the evidence showed, was the only person in the house for the purpose of having his automobile repaired, according to his own testimony. It was shown that these repairs had never been made and therefore it was expressed that the candles were more than a week to prepare the Dudley house for that fire, and Dr. Dudley, the evidence showed, was the only person in the house for the purpose of having his automobile repaired, according to his own testimony.

Distilled the legal side of the case, cutting each case down to its higher court on preliminary examination evidence. It was brought out that courts have held that there should be a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the offense charged before he be bound over for trial. "There is no question but that any offense has been committed in this case," said Jeffris, "but a careful planned means of furnishing an alibi."

ed his arguments by citing the Louisiana case of Beloit, where the supreme court refused to consider the circumstantial evidence, offered by the state, but rather the ability testimony. Attorney Pierce claimed that the account given of the fire and the plastering from the hole in Dr. Dudley's bedroom, made in the wall to make a draft from the cellar, was false, and that much of the defendant's testimony was also shown to be false by a comparison of the different evidence offered in the two examinations. The account of the plastering being removed from the hole, before the fire, as claimed by the state, is one of the strongest allegations made in the examination. Two witnesses had testified that the plaster was not there when the fire broke out, and had been removed from the floor to the cellar and that the material was not smoke colored, showing that someone with a knowledge of the house had carried it below and plastered it over for a couple of weeks of business. GOOD VAUDEVILLE IN "PINK WIDOW"

Clamaghe's Musical Comedy Revue Appear in "The Pink Widow" at Myers Theatre Last Evening.

"The Pink Widow," as shown at Myers Theatre last evening by Arthur Clamaghe and his big musical organization, is crammed full of good vaudeville specialties, singing, dancing and novel comedy.

Throughout the piece some sixteen musical numbers are introduced. Clamaghe is seen in his favorite role of a German of extraordinary proportions. Mable Faleer appears in a novel stunt, "The Girl and the Bag," in which she is seen in the claws of a huge eagle which swoops over the audience. Particularly enjoyable was "The Sextette from Lucia" in ragtime by Misses Fields, Faleer and Davis.

The novelty dancing of Jack Prescott brought forth round after round of applause, and the singing of Miss Faleer and the chorus in a special number also won well merited applause and responded to a number of encores.

The scenic effects were noticeable and the second act was introduced very good. The chorus were prettily costumed, differently for each ensemble number.

The company will play "The Girl from Luxembourg," another musical comedy attraction.

BIG ROLL IS MISSED BY THIS HOLDUP MAN

According to Academy street residents living just north of the Green tobacco warehouses and the railroad crossing, an attempted robbery occurred last night near the intersection of Race street back of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway depot, and Academy street.

An elderly lady who is reported to have given the name of Miss Fox is reported to have been the victim. The man stepped from the shadows and grabbed at her purse. She struggled and ran to the home of Edgar Hamer at 211 Academy street. She lost her purse during the excitement and also was minus an ear trumpet, as she is deaf.

The purses containing a big roll of bills were found on the grass near the sidewalk a short while later. Mrs. Hamer wanted to report the matter to the police, but did not on the place at that time. Officer of Police Champlain, up to noon today, had received no word regarding the hold-up.

Two advanced side by side along what was once a well-trodden path, making no attempt at concealment. Indeed, any such effort would have been useless, as the crest of the ridge lay open, and bare of vegetation, but I was so fully convinced we were unobserved that I took no precaution—my entire thought, indeed, centered upon the girl at my side.

The heavy latch of the front door lifted easily to the pressure of my hand, and we stepped into a narrow vestibule. Noreen grasping my arm nervously, as she faced the shadowed interior of the deserted building. Some instinct of caution caused me to close the door behind us, and then I drew her forward, laughing at her fears, until we obtained glimpse of the larger room, already becoming obscured by the approaching night. It was a rather shabby-looking place, not overly clean, even in that merciful dimness. Rude benches, without backs, stretched almost from wall to wall, a narrow aisle leading to the pulpit, set within an alcove, and scarcely discernible except in barest outlines. I recognized a big Bible, lying open on the gaudy pulpit stand. A book of some kind, gilded and coverless, lay on the floor at my feet, and I bent to pick it up. As I came upright again, a man stepped from the shadow of a corner, and the steel barrel of a revolver flashed before my eyes. I felt Noreen cringe against me, uttering a muffled cry.

"Stand as you are, Yank," said a rather pleasant voice. "Pardon me, lady."

He was a young fellow, with bold, black eyes, a little jaunty mustache, and a mouth inclined to laugh, but what I stared at in open-eyed astonishment, was his broad-brimmed hat and natty gray cavalry jacket.

"Some surprise party, I reckon," he chuckled grimly. "Here, Wharton, kindly relieve the gentleman of his arsenal; take the lady's gun, also. It's all right, boys."

To my unbounded amazement, up from the floor, where they had been lying concealed beneath the benches, a number of men came scrambling to their feet. Those nearest me were arrayed in drab uniforms, with carbines in their hands.

"Who, in heaven's name, are you?" I asked, at last finding my voice. "Confederates here?"

"Your first guess is an excellent one," he answered lightly, evidently enjoying the scene. "You have the honor of being prisoner to the Third Kentucky cavalry. Wharton."

"Yes, sir." The sergeant advanced. "Conduct the lady and gentleman to the sanctity of the pulpit, sergeant, where they may commune with the presiding genius of this house of worship erected in the wilderness."

"You mean you hold prisoner Parson Nichols?" I asked.

"No doubt 'tis he. We discovered the party alone here, and held him for the pleasure of his company."

"Just a moment, lieutenant," and I faced him squarely, ignoring the grip of Wharton's hand on my arm. "There is no reason to hold us prisoners; all there is Yankees about me is this uniform. I have just escaped from the Federal guard at Lewisburg."

His eyes, laughing, yet suspicious, swept our faces.

"I'm not easily fooled," he said, "but ready enough to learn. Who are you?"

"Thomas Wyatt, sergeant, Staunton horse artillery."

"By all the gods, it soundeth strange. How came you here?"

"On Jackson's orders, I was born in this country, and because of that he chose me to find out the numbers and disposition of the Federal troops in this neighborhood, together with some other facts he wished to know. I was captured in Federal uniform, and held under death sentence as a spy. I escaped last night."

"And the woman?"

She threw back the cape which had partially concealed her face, revealing her bright eyes and flushed cheeks.

"Permit me to answer for myself, Lieutenant Harwood."

"Noreen Harwood! Why, it takes me off my feet. How comes it you are here?"

"My father is dead," she answered simply, the brightness vanishing from her face. "He was killed only a few days ago."

"I regret to learn that, cousin," and he held out his hand. "Who is this man, and why are you here with him?"

"He has told you the truth," she answered quietly, her hand still within his. "I have known him from childhood. I am his wife."

There was a moment of silence, of hesitation. I heard the soldiers moving about the room, and the murmur of voices speaking cautiously. Then Harwood released her hand, and extended his own to me, his eyes frank and cordial.

"I accept you on faith, comrade," he said pleasantly, "but there is a spare gray jacket strapped to my saddle yonder more becoming than that blue coat. Saint Christopher! but 'tis a most happy family reunion we're having; I'll want the story presently, but now I must look to my men. 'Tis no easy game we're playing."

"Let me understand that, lieutenant," I exclaimed, as he turned away. "How does it happen you are here, and for what purpose?"

"A wild plan of my own, aided and abetted by the commander at Covington. We are of the garrison there," he explained briefly, his glance searching out the dim interior. "The Yankees have a forage train out as far as Hot Springs. I got permission for a dash to cut them off. We took the cut-off, and landed here about daylight. The train should have been along before now, but there is no sign of it."

"You have been in hiding here all day, and seen nothing?"

"Oh! we've seen enough," and he laughed. "But nothing we cared to measure swords with. The road yonder appears popular, but, by good luck, no Yankee shows an eagerness to attend church. There was a gang of mountain men along by here maybe two hours ago who rode up to the door, and took a look at the shebang. Whether they were Yank or Reb I didn't know. Anyhow, we were willing enough to see them pass on out of sight. They looked and talked as though they were spoiling for a fight."

"How many?"

"Thirty or forty—a right smart crowd. There were only two came up, and rode round the church—a big fellow with a red beard, and a little weasel-faced fox he called Kelly."

"Yes, I know them; they were hunting after us. Did they go on east?"

"They did. So has everyone else we've seen today. That's what puzzled us, as to just what might be up. I reckon you must be some popular to create such a furore. Why, an hour after sunup a whole blame company of bluecoats went by, riding like mad, their horses dripping, and a young fellow spurring them on. He'd lost his hat, and they never so much as took a side look at this shebang. They were in some hurry, my friend."

"And neither party has returned?"

"Not a sign of them."

"What force have you here?"

"Twenty-eight enlisted men."

"You have pickets out?"

"One man each way, a mile down the road, concealed. The tower up there commands the country in both directions."

"And your horses?"

"Hidden in the grove yonder."

I grasped the situation clearly enough, and also comprehended the reckless nonchalance of the officer. What was his purpose—his present plan? It appeared to me that the conditions warranted a retreat, back along the unfrequented mountain trail by which this daring party of adventurers had come. The troops, as well as the guerrillas, must have discovered by this time that we were not in all ease of them. They would return searching every nook and corner in hope of discovering our hiding place. They might even wait their forces, impelled as they were by the same desire, and thus become truly formidable. Personal hatred of me and the wish to regain possession of Noreen, would animate and control both Anse Cowan and the angry, humiliated lieutenant.

While neither would likely confess his purpose to the other, yet their mutual interests would naturally suggest an alliance. And there was no war feud between the two which would necessarily prevent their co-operation. Indeed, the troops would gladly welcome any excuse which would bring Cowan's gang of outlaws into closer connection. And the outfit would never pass by this church again without searching its interior. Only eagerness, a haste to overtake us in our attempted flight, had led to their blind riding, before, I turned to Harwood, who was whispering nonsense to Noreen.

"What do you mean to do, lieutenant?" I asked quietly, but with my own mind made up. "Remain here?"

He stroked his small mustache. "I thought we might hang on until midnight, Wyatt, and then, if nothing happened, take the back trail. I don't want to pass another day in this cursed hole. What do you think?"

"That the sooner we get away the better," I answered promptly. "Your position here is far more dangerous than you appear to realize. Both those parties traveling east were in search after us; they were led by men who would go to any extreme to effect our capture. I haven't time to tell you the whole story now, but it involves your cousin as well as myself. They rode straight on because they were convinced we were still ahead of them. 'Tis likely they know better now, and will search every ravine and covert on their return. If the forage train is moving this way those cavalymen are with it in addition to the regular guard, and you will never dare attack with your small force. The only chance you have of bringing your command safely back to Covington, lieutenant, is to get away before your presence here is suspected."

"I suppose that's right," he admitted reluctantly. "But I don't like to turn tail without hitting a blow—it's not the style of the Third Kentucky. We could give a good account of ourselves against those Yankee troopers."

"Possibly; but not against a combination of troopers, wagon guard, and Cowan's gang of guerrillas. They would outnumber you four to one; and they are fighting men."

"You think they will combine?"

"If they meet, and there is an explanation—yes. Cowan doesn't care which side he fights on, so he gains his end, and the cavalry commander will welcome any reinforcements. They might quarrel later over results, but now they possess a common object, and will be like two peas in a pod. Do as you please, Harwood, but I am not under your command, and if you choose to remain here, we will ride on alone. Will you go with me, Noreen?"

She had not spoken, and in the fast-increasing gloom I could scarcely distinguish her presence. But at my direct question she took a step toward me, and I felt the presence of her hand on my sleeve.

"Yes," she said simply, "whenever you think best. Cousin," she added, glancing across her shoulder at the perplexed officer, "I would like you to come too."

He laughed, wheeling about in sudden decision.

"I reckon I might as well," he admitted good-humoredly. "Wharton, have the pickets drawn in, and the men mustered. 'We'll start—Great God! What is that?'"

It was the sound of a scattered volley, the pieces not all of the same caliber, the reports ringing clear. In the instant of silence which followed a voice called down excitedly from the tower:

"There is firing to the east, sir."

Harwood swore as he strode across to the nearest window on that side. Except for a faint tinge of light in the west, and a half moon in the southern sky, we were enveloped in darkness, but we all of us heard the sounds of hoofs and the approaching rumble of wagon wheels. Harwood turned and faced inward.

"It's the forage train, boys," he said sharply. "With a bunch of cavalry riding ahead. Get to the windows, but be quiet about it—you know the orders. Wharton, have the men load; come with me, Wyatt, where we can see out in front."

Noreen clung to me as I groped my way through the narrow door into the vestibule.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Trap Closes.

The lieutenant's fingers gripped my shoulder.

"By the Lord Harry, the fellows make noise enough for an army," he whispered. "I reckon they are all there."

"No doubt of it—how is your ammunition?"

"Sixty rounds to a man," he chuckled. "It will cost them something to get through these log walls. Still, we haven't much chance in the end," he added thoughtfully, "for they're bound to get us. Generally I pray for a fight, but now I hope those Yanks will be kind enough to ride by."

"And so do I," I answered soberly, feeling the quick pressure of Noreen's fingers. "There they come, Harwood—see! Two horsemen ahead."

They were merely black shadows outlined against the white road, but as they drew somewhat closer the moonlight gave them substance. One was slender, sitting straight in the saddle, but the other slouched awkwardly over his pommel, a larger, more shapeless figure. In the distance, down the sharp slope of the hill, appeared the deeper shadow of an advancing column of mounted men. The only sound was the impatient pawing of a horse's hoof and Noreen's whisper in my ear:

"The bigger one is Anse Cowan."

"And the other Raymond," I returned in the same low tone. "The two have apparently got together."

"It looks mighty odd to me," said a voice suddenly, clearly audible through the night, "that fellow being in Reb uniform. What could he be doing here?"

"A scout, I reckon," grumbled a reply, barely distinguishable. "Just a stray we run into, but it must be best to take a look along this yere ridge afore we ride on."

"All right," asserted the other. "I'll wait here until Fox and Moran come up. Let some of your men ride back as far as those woods over yonder;

WIFE DEAR, I'M GOING TO TAKE A WALK ON THE BEACH, AND GET THE AIR—AND SEE THE VIEW!

AND HE DID.

Among the passengers on a train on a one-track road in the middle west was a talkative jewelry drummer.

Presently the train stopped to take on water, and the conductor neglected to send back a flagman. An express came along and, before it could be stopped, bumped the rear end of the first train.

The drummer was lifted from his seat and pitched head first into the seat ahead. His silk hat was jammed clear down over his ears.

He picked himself up and settled back in his seat. No bones had been broken. He drew a long breath, straightened up, and said to himself: "Well, they didn't get by us, anyway."

"Misto' Interlocutor," began the end man, "I wants to ax yo' a question."

"Very well, Mr. Bones. What is your question?"

"Why does a chicken cross de road?"

"That is a very old one, Mr. Bones. She crosses the road because she wants to get on the other side, of course."

"Yessuh, dat's right, Misto' Interlocutor. An' now, since yo' is so smart, mebbe yo' kin tell me why she wants to get on de other side."

"No, Mr. Bones, I'm afraid I can't tell you that. Why does the chicken want to get on the other side of the road?"

"Cause dey's a young gemman over dere what's got de price of a ice cream soda in his pocket."

Small Dorothy was visiting in the country and spied a red-and-white calf.

"Oh, mamma," she exclaimed, "look at the little calico-colored cow!"

MAY OIL NEW ROADS AS SOON AS BUILT

HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER MOORE
SEES NECESSITY FOR ALTER-ING COUNTY'S METHODS.

WORK IS PROGRESSING

Highways Still in Process of Construction Will Be Completed This Season—Building Cement Roads.

Rock county faces the need of radically altering its methods of road building according to Highway Commissioner Moore, who stated today that the enormous increase in the volume of automobile traffic this year had made the adoption of some new system imperative. Mr. Moore stated that his remedy is to oil all macadam roads as soon as completed. This has been the practice in Dane county and can be done in Rock county in the case of water bound work.

Mr. Moore and members of the county highway committee were at Madison earlier in the week and took a trip of inspection with State Engineer First over some of the highways. In Dane county, the work is an unusual amount of oiling this season despite the weather conditions. Dane county has been more successful in oiling this year because of the fact that the heavy grade of asphalt thinned down so that it can be applied without heating, has been used. The Dane county equipment consists of four oilers, where Rock county has but one, and two machines are used on the same stretch which greatly facilitates the work.

Oiling of Rock county roads will be practically abandoned for the rest of the season according to Mr. Moore because it is getting late and because of the expense entailed when there is but one oiler to distribute a whole car load of oil. In case the county adopts the plan suggested by Mr. Moore of spreading oil on newly built highways in 1916, it will be necessary to purchase more oiling equipment.

Highway building this season has suffered on account of the wet weather which has made necessary an extraordinary amount of work on roads after construction work has been completed. Time and again the roads have been trimmed and rolled in some cases the subgrade was not thoroughly dry when the surfacing was done, and traffic on such stretches was gouged ruts which had to receive special attention.

With the exception of the Janesville-Edgerton road, practically all the highways out of Janesville are now open to traffic. Mr. Moore stated today that the Edgerton road near the county farm one of the crusher outfits is employed on a resurfacing job. Gravel on top of the rock ledge is proving excellent material for the work. McGaveck has completed the grading on the new work north of Shoemaker's corner and has begun spreading the gravel resurfacing. Mr. Moore stated that it was his plan to complete the 1916 work voted on this road this fall if he can possibly get a survey in time. Even if this is done there will be still a mile or so more of road unbuilt, but the worst stretch will be remedied.

Work is still in progress on the Beloit-Clinton road in the town of Turtle where a cement pavement is being laid. Some delay has been experienced in receiving sand because as it has gone the road looks to be first class, comparing with similar work which is being done this year in Dane county, notably on the Beloit drive. Two blocks of concrete pavement have been finished in Edgerton and additional concrete work fifteen feet in width is now being done on the outskirts of the city in the country.

In the village of Clinton a fifteen foot wide crush gravel macadam movement is being built, and Contractor Finley is employed on the White-water road near Lima Center. The Delavan road in Bradford is now complete and Contractor Jones is working the Smithton road in the same township.

Other road building operations now in progress include the resurfacing of the Monroe road in the town of Beloit and the construction of a new highway on the Madison road in Newark. Work scheduled in the vicinity of Evansville has been practically completed for the season. In regard to complaints which have been received from motorists that high weeds obscure culverts on some highways, making it dangerous to turn from the main track to meet or pass rigs, Mr. Moore stated that it was a problem which townships must solve. The county would be willing to pay to have the weeds cut if some one could be found to do the work. It has been the practice within the last few years, Mr. Moore said, to build cement buttresses plainly marking the culverts.

FORMER MONROE MAN IS CONVICTED OF POLYGAMY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Monroe, Wis., Sept. 1.—Carroll Fuller, a former resident of this city, has entered a plea of guilty at Sheboygan to a charge of polygamy and has been sentenced to two years in the state's prison at Waupun. During his residence here, he was representative of an extensive investigation of school and had display in several of the widows of business establishments.

He was arrested on the complaint of a Port Atkinson woman, his first wife, whom he alleges drove him out of the house in February, 1914. Later he was married to a young woman at Sheboygan Falls, believing, according to him, that his wife was dead. He alleged that while in Monroe he had received a telegram from his family physician at Janesville informing that the wife was dead, and now declares he lost the telegram. Little credence was given his story as it would have been possible for him to have seen the message if such a one had been transmitted by a telegraph company.

WORKS AS CONDUCTOR WITH ARTIFICIAL LEG

H. L. Bartholomew, Injured Here in December, Given New Run by Northwestern Company.

On the morning of December 28th, last winter, H. L. Bartholomew of Marshfield, a Chicago and Northwestern railway conductor on the Fond du Lac passenger, alighting from his train to signal the engineer to stop for an eleventh hour passenger, slipped on the ice-covered brick platform and fell beneath the wheels, crushing his left limb so badly that amputation at the knee was necessary at Mercy hospital that morning. Bartholomew lay in a precarious condition for several weeks but finally rallied and grew well. He was taken to his home at Marshfield, finally, and since that time has grown strong.

That railroad companies are not the heartless corporations to the extent that they have been painted in certain instances, was shown in Bartholomew's case. The Northwestern company did everything possible to give the injured man the best of care and attention and further, promised him a job on his getting well. Bartholomew had been a railroad worker for quite a number of years. His energy, honesty and attention to business made for him an enviable record. Today, equipped with an artificial limb, Conductor Bartholomew resumed his old duties as a Chicago and Northwestern conductor. He has been given a run between Fond du Lac and Green Bay.

SEPARATE MEN AND BOYS AT Y. M. C. A. NEW PLAN IN VIEW

Old Billiard Room Will Be New Boys'
Department.—Men Will Use Main Lobby.—Submit Plan to Board.

Extensive plans for the separating of men and boys at the local Y. M. C. A. during the coming winter were approved last evening at a meeting of the house and boys' work committees held at the association building. The scheme will be presented before the board at its next regular meeting on Monday evening, September 6th, and Secretary Bearmore is confident of its passing.

So carefully have the new plans been made that there is no doubt but what the boys and men will be elated over the change when made. The idea is to separate the boys under eighteen entirely from those over eighteen. This is to be done primarily by placing the boys' room or department on the second floor, where the old billiard room was the past year. The need of such a room has been felt for many years, and with the new boys' secretary, Mr. Center, arriving on Saturday, it is believed that much progress will at once be attained through this department, which although an old idea in Y. M. C. A. circles, is a new project in the annals of the Janesville institution.

To make more room in this new department the plan is to take two of the billiard and pool tables out of the first floor for the use of the men. In this way the men and boys will be provided with one billiard and one pool table. The boys will not be allowed to enter the main entrance, but will have exclusive use of the large entrance in the new addition. The winding stairway to the basement, where the lockers and swimming tank was located, will be used more freely than last year by both men and boys.

The library will remain where it now is, and the main lobby fitted out more attractively by the addition of large and beautiful steel engravings which have been donated to the institution. The furniture will be moved to allow space for the billiard and pool tables. Mr. Center will take charge of the boys' department at all times, and a young man, possibly a high school student, will be stationed at the desk on the main floor to care for the table and issue information.

The main idea of the new secretary is to bring the members into closer relationship and to make the building as attractive for the members as possible. Something doing all the time is the slogan, and at the rate progress is now being made, the activities will be opened with a crash within a few weeks.

LITTLE MISS BROWN IS A DELIGHTFUL COMEDY.

One of the most delightful little comedies seen recently was "Little Miss Brown" in which Vivian Martin displayed last night at the Apollo, all the rich and piquant gifts of comedy of which she is the possessor. Pretty and attractive, she delights the eye and excites the imagination for she is one of these miniature unobtainables, not uncommon in real life, who for ever set you wondering what they are going to do next.

TWO AUTOS COLLIDE
AT TURN OF ROAD.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Orfordville, Aug. 31.—On Monday afternoon a "near accident" occurred about a mile and a half east of the village, that might have resulted seriously. A party of autoists from the village were going to Janesville and when east of the Roan farm, collided with a car driven by E. M. Renli. The Orfordville party were headed east and were running at a fair rate of speed and did not notice that Renli was coming from the south intending to turn into the road ahead of them. The turn was made before the driver of the east bound car was aware of the presence of the second machine and before he could get his own sufficiently slowed down to avoid collision he had struck Renli, damaging the hub of the hind wheel and badly bending one of the fenders. His own car was also quite seriously damaged. The driver of the Orfordville car was pitched out by the force of the impact and considerably shaken up, but fortunately no one was seriously injured.
